The staff of Panda Programmer teaches kids the joy of coding computers by helping them program their own customized animations, educational applications, and computer games. Our students have a blast, while we guide them and help them learn graphics, control structures, and debugging- all within a solid event-based model of computer programming using the Scratch platform (developed by MIT). This is NOT playing games, this is real Computer Science! Each student is provided with his or her own computer to work on for this class. Advanced students work on robots, within a Scratch-like platform.
